It used to be...

When the telephone was very young, people answered their calls by shouting "Ahoy!" Later on, this was changed to the familiar "Hello."

But people using the telephone in business have found that "Hello" tells the caller nothing, and wastes time.

Today they use a proper identification in answering telephone calls. They say, "Mr. Jones speaking," or "The J. Doe Company, good morning," or "This is the shipping department." Answering telephone calls that way saves time and is good business.

NEW YORK TELEPHONE COMPANY

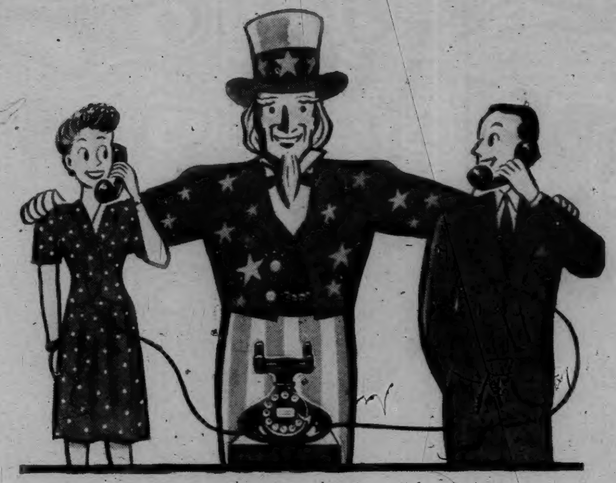
WINTER-SPRING 1944

"Please don't call 'Information' unless you've checked the directory FIRST"

Needless calls to "Information" waste telephone service—and Uncle Sam doesn't want anyone wasting anything, especially such a vital thing as telephone service that speeds the movement of materials, munitions and men.

Wartime restrictions and shortages of materials prevent additions to "Information" service. It is this situation that makes it so important that "Information" be asked only for numbers not in the telephone book. If these needless calls were eliminated "Information" could quickly handle all really necessary calls —and skilled operators transferred to jobs where more of their time would be used on calls vital to the war.

YOU CAN HELP—IN THESE 3 WAYS



1 Keep in your pocket, handbag or desk—or near your telephone—your own personal telephone list.

2 Look up numbers you are not sure of. Refer to your personal list or the directory and call "INFORMATION" only when you cannot find the number.

3 If you must get a number from "INFORMATION", jot it down, so you won't have to call "INFORMATION" again for the same number.

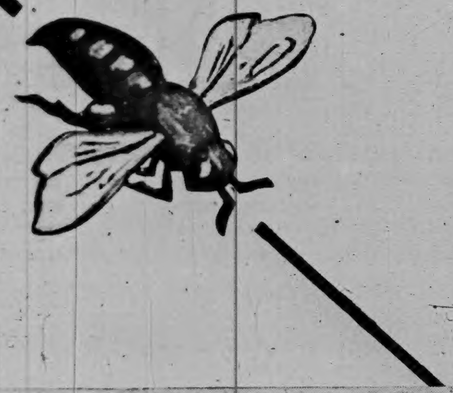
Party Lines Are Patriotic Now

Because Uncle Sam needs more copper for fighting, the home-front is getting along with less copper for its day-by-day telephoning. That's why more and more people are using party-line telephone service. They're sharing the supply of telephone equipment with their neighbors.



If you are one of those who have party-line service, you'll find that you'll get better service by adopting the good neighbor policy. For instance, you'll keep these few things in mind whenever you use your telephone:

1. Make sure the line is not busy before placing a call.
2. Be careful not to interrupt a conversation if the line is being used. If, however, you are calling in an emergency, explain to those using the line and ask them to let you make your call.
3. Be as brief as possible on all calls.
4. If you are making a series of calls, provide an intermission after each one so that your neighbors may also have a chance to use their telephones. Make fewer calls in the morning. Postpone them to the less-busy afternoon.
5. Always replace your receiver when you finish a call—and please do it gently.
6. Answer all calls promptly.
